

COMMENTARY

The Fund returned 2.4% in September 2025. The MSCI EM Index returned 7.2%. After a strong August the Fund's holdings continued to rise over the month, but this time at a lower rate than the Index. The Index and wider global stock market are in full AI mania. The largest Fund exposure, TSMC, is a key beneficiary and other holdings such as United Integrated Services (UIS) are winners from the AI capex boom, but we remain wary of chasing stocks with narrow economic moats. In particular, we note the rapid rises in share prices of SK Hynix, Samsung Electronics and Alibaba. We lack sufficient confidence in the future cash flow compounding of these stocks to justify investment, and prefer our existing positions, but these stocks have been leading the Index higher. Top portfolio performers over the month were CATL, the dominant global battery manufacturer for EVs and energy storage (which is increasingly important), as well as Grab, the dominant ride-hailing company in South-East Asia. UIS gave back some of its previous stellar gains, during which we had reduced the position, and some of our Indian stocks showed continued softness after strength the previous year, including MakeMyTrip and Varun Beverages, the Pepsi franchise. We retain conviction.
